ORDER

17 Pending before the Court is Plaintiff's<sup>1</sup> Motion to Remand to Pinal County Superior
18 Court ("Superior Court"). (Dkt. # 10.)

19 Plaintiff initially filed this insurance bad faith case in Superior Court on June 15, 20 2009. (Dkt. # 2 Ex. A.) On July 14, 2009, Defendants gave notice of removal to federal 21 court, alleging original jurisdiction based on diversity of citizenship and an amount in 22 controversy exceeding $75,000. (Dkt. ## 1–2.) Plaintiff now seeks remand to Superior 23 Court, contending this Court lacks jurisdiction because the amount in controversy does not 24 exceed $75,000. For the following reasons, the Court grants Plaintiff's motion.<sup>2</sup>

25 _____
26 <sup>1</sup> Plaintiff Geraldine Brown died during the pendency of this action. (Dkt. # 17.) Plaintiff Thomas Brown, Geraldine's husband, remains a party.

28 <sup>2</sup> Defendant's request for oral argument is denied because the parties have had an adequate opportunity to discuss the law and evidence and oral argument will not aid the

BACKGROUND

2 The Complaint alleges Mr. and Ms. Brown (collectively, “the Browns”) purchased a 3 home health care policy (“Policy”) from Defendant in 2007. (Dkt. # 2 Ex. A at 5.) The 4 Policy promised to provide long-term care benefits for a chronically-ill family member up
5 to a monthly maximum of $3,720 and a lifetime maximum of $131,400. (Id.) In August 6 2008, Ms. Brown became terminally ill, and the Browns began using “Home Instead” 7 services to provide home health care to Ms. Brown, expecting Defendant to pay for these 8 services. (Id. at 5–6.) The Browns used Home Instead services during January, February, 9 and March of 2009, and Home Instead billed Defendant in excess of $3,000 for these 10 services. (Id. at 6)

Defendant, however, refused to pay for these services. On February 17, 2009, Defendant informed the Browns that Policy coverage had ended on December 30, 2008. (Id. at 6.) Sometime closely thereafter, Defendant reinstated the Policy, but still refused to pay for the Home Instead services rendered in January, February, and March of 2009. (Id. at 7–10).

16 The Complaint's prayer for relief did not seek a specific dollar amount, but instead 17 sought (1) “[c]ompensatory damages for unpaid benefits, and loss of use of benefits . . . , 18 together with interest,” (2) “[c]ompensatory damages for personal injuries, mental and 19 emotional distress and anxiety and other incidental damages,” (3) “[p]unitive and exemplary 20 damages in an amount appropriate to punish and to deter,” (4) “attorneys fees,” (5) “costs of 21 suit,” and (6) “such other and further relief as to the Court seems just and proper.” (Id. at 12.)

Along with its Complaint, Plaintiff filed an Arizona Rule of Civil Procedure 68 Offer of Judgment, proposing judgment for $70,000. (Id. at 13–14.)

24 On July 14, 2009, Defendant filed a notice of removal to this Court under 28 U.S.C.
25 1441(a). (Dkt. ## 1-2.) Defendants contend this Court has jurisdiction because the parties

1 are citizens of different states and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000. Plaintiff 2 contests only the amount in controversy.

3 DISCUSSION

4 “[A]ny civil action brought in a State court of which the district courts of the United 5 States have original jurisdiction, may be removed by the defendant . . . to the district court 6 of the United States for the district and division embracing the place where such action is 7 pending.” 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a). “Only . . . actions that originally could have been filed in 8 federal court may be removed to federal court by the defendant.” *Caterpillar, Inc. v.
9 Williams*, 482 U.S. 386, 392 (1987). “If at any time before final judgment it appears 10 that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the case shall be remanded.” 11 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). There is a “strong presumption” against removal, and “[f]ederal 12 jurisdiction must be rejected if there is any doubt as to the right of removal in the first 13 instance.” Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992) (citing Libhart v. Santa 14 Monica Dairy Co., 592 F.2d 1062, 1064 (9th Cir. 1979)). One way a district court may have 15 removal jurisdiction is if the plaintiff and defendant are citizens of different states and the 16 “matter in controversy exceeds . . . $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs.” See 28 U.S.C.
17 § 1332(a). The burden of proof regarding the amount in controversy depends on whether the 18 face of the plaintiff’s complaint alleges a specific amount or whether the complaint is 19 ambiguous. Guglielmino v. McKee Foods Corp., 506 F.3d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 2007); Sanchez 20 v. Monumental Life Ins. Co., 102 F.3d 398, 402, 404 (9th Cir. 1996).

21 I. The Face of Plaintiff’s Complaint Does Not Allege a Specific Amount in Controversy of More Than $75,000.

22 In proving the amount in controversy, “when a complaint filed in state court alleges 23 on its face an amount [exceeding $75,000], such requirement is presumptively satisfied 24 unless it appears to a ‘legal certainty’ that the plaintiff cannot actually recover that amount.
25 Guglielmino, 506 F.3d at 699(citing Sanchez v. Monumental Life Ins. Co., 102 F.3d 398, 402 26 (9th Cir. 1996)).

1       Defendant's Memorandum in Support of Notice of Removal contends the Complaint 2 facially alleges an amount exceeding $75,000 because the Policy's lifetime maximum is 3 $131,400. (Dkt. # 2 Ex. C at 4.) Plaintiff's Complaint, however, does not seek the Policy's
4 outer limit, but instead seeks the unpaid benefits for services rendered in January, February, 5 and March of 2009. (Dkt. # 2 Ex. A at 6–7, 12.) These total only approximately $3,000, as 6 billed by Home Instead to Defendant in early 2009. (Id. at 6). The Complaint seeks only 7 these early-2009 unpaid benefits because the Defendant reinstated the Policy coverage 8 shortly thereafter. (Id. at 7). In fact, the damages owed cannot possibly grow beyond the 9 amount already alleged because the Browns stopped using in-home care before June of 2009
10 and because Ms. Brown, who had received the care, recently passed away.<sup>3</sup> (Id. at 9; Dkt. # 11 17.)

12 II. Defendant Has Not Shown the Amount in Controversy More Likely Than Not 13 Exceeds $75,000.

14       Because Plaintiff's Complaint is "unclear or ambiguous" regarding the amount in 15 controversy, Guglielmino, 506 F.3d at 699, Defendant "bears the burden of establishing, by 16 a preponderance of the evidence, that the amount in controversy exceeds [$75,000]." Sanchez, 102 F.3d at 404 ("[T]he defendant must provide evidence establishing that it is 17 'more likely than not' that the amount in controversy exceeds [$75,000]."); see also Gaus, 18 980 F.2d at 566-67 ("If it is unclear what amount of damages the plaintiff has sought, . . .
19 then the defendant bears the burden of actually proving the facts to support . . . the 20 jurisdictional amount."). "[R]emoval 'cannot be based simply upon conclusory allegations'

22

23       <sup>3</sup> Defendant cites several out-of-circuit cases, none of which is apposite. In Harrison 24 v. Ace American Insurance Company, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50806 (M.D. Ala. June 15, 25 2009), the amount in controversy exceeded $75,000 when the plaintiff "made a claim . . . for 26 the policy limits of $2,000,000" (emphasis added). Moreover, both Waller v. Professional 27 Insurance Corporation, 296 F.2d 545 (5th Cir. 1961), and Pries v. New England Life 28 Insurance Company, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63845 (W.D. La. Aug. 28, 2007), found the requisite amount in controversy when plaintiffs sought to bind the defendants to full insurance policies. In this case, however, Plaintiff does not seek the policy limit, but instead seeks only the amount of past unpaid benefits.

1 where the [complaint] is silent” as to the dollar amount sought. Singer v. State Farm Mut.
2 Auto. Ins. Co., 116 F.3d 373, 377 (9th Cir. 1997).

3           A.     Unpaid Benefits

4           The unpaid insurance benefits Plaintiff seeks do not alone meet the amount-in-5 controversy requirement. As discussed above, contrary to Defendant’s assertions, nothing
6 in Plaintiff’s Complaint suggests it seeks either the $131,400 Policy limit or even the $3,720
7 monthly maximum. Plaintiff seeks only the approximately $3,000 of unpaid benefits from 8 in-home care in early 2009. (Dkt. # 2 Ex. A at 6, 12.)

9           B.     Personal Injury, Emotional Distress, Punitive Damages, and Attorneys’
10           Fees

11           Defendant contends Plaintiff’s other theories of relief establish the amount-in-12 controversy requirement. The Court disagrees. In determining the amount in controversy, 13 courts may consider damages for physical injury and emotional distress, punitive damages, 14 and attorneys’ fees. See Kroske v. US Bank Corp., 432 F.3d 976, 980 (9th Cir. 2005)
15 (considering emotional distress awards in similar cases); Gibson v. Chrysler Corp., 261 F.3d 16 927, 945 (9th Cir. 2001) (“[P]unitive damages are part of the amount in controversy . . .”); 17 Galt G/S v. JSS Scandinavia, 142 F.3d 1150, 1156 (9th Cir. 1998) (“[W]here an underlying 18 statute authorized an award of attorneys’ fees, either with mandatory or discretionary 19 language, such fees may be included in the amount in controversy.”). However, these 20 damages and fees must not leave substantial doubt and must be more than speculative to meet 21 Defendant’s burden of proving the amount in controversy. See Sanchez, 102 F.3d at 404; 22 Singer, 116 F.3d at 377.

23           Here, Defendant presents inadequate evidence to show the amount in controversy 24 exceeds $75,000. While Plaintiff’s prayer for relief for personal injuries, emotional distress, 25 punitive damages, and attorneys’ fees are relevant to determining the amount in controversy, 26 Defendant must offer more than conclusory allegations or speculation.

27           Defendant contends emotional distress and punitive damage awards would exceed 28 $75,000 because several other insurance cases authorized large awards. While courts

1 sometime analyze comparable awards, see, for example, Ansley v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 215
2 F.R.D. 575 (D. Ariz. 2003), Defendant must “articulate why the particular facts that are 3 alleged in the instant action might warrant extraordinary” damages. See Haisch v. Allstate
4 Ins. Co., 942 F. Supp. 1245, 1249 (D. Ariz. 1996) (emphasis added) (“It would be inherently 5 speculative . . . to conclude that the amount in controversy requirement can be met simply 6 by asserting that large punitive damages have been awarded in the past against insurance 7 companies . . . ”). Here, Defendant fails to show any specific reasons emotional distress or 8 punitive damages would be large in this case. None of Defendant’s comparison cases dealt 9 with home health-care insurance, and Defendant does not explain how three months of 10 unpaid policy benefits totaling approximately $3,000 would spring into over $75,000.

11       Defendant also offers an Affidavit of Counsel explaining how past insurance bad faith 12 cases have resulted in attorneys’ fees exceeding $75,000. Similar to punitive damage and 13 emotional distress comparisons, however, Defendant fails to articulate particular facts 14 showing why attorneys’ fees would be large in this case. Compare Haisch, 942 F. Supp. at 15 1249 (discussing punitive damages). Showing specific reasons attorneys’ fees would be large 16 seems especially important given Plaintiff’s unpaid Policy benefits are only around $3,000.

17       Defendant relies on Ansley, which found the amount in controversy satisfied when the 18 plaintiff alleged more than a year of unpaid long-term disability benefits and when the 19 defendant compared other large punitive damage awards and attorneys’ fees. 215 F.R.D. 575
20 (D. Ariz. 2003). Ansley, however, dealt with over one year of unpaid long-term disability 21 benefits totaling more than $50,000, whereas this case deals with three months of unpaid in-22 home care benefits totaling around $3,000. Plaintiff in this case also filed, and Defendant 23 declined, a $70,000 offer of judgment, further suggesting the parties perceive a lower amount 24 in controversy.

25       The present case compares more closely with Matheson v. Progressive Specialty
26 Insurance Company, 319 F.3d 1089 (9th Cir. 2003). In Matheson, an insurance company
27 failed to pay insured’s claim for loss of a truck for two months. Id. at 1091. The truck’s 28 market value was only $15,516, and the court found the short-term deprivation would not

1 justify economic, emotional distress, and punitive damage claims totaling over $75,000. Id.
2 In this case, economic damage is alleged to be only approximately $3,000, and Defendant
3 failed to pay benefits for only three months. Without more facts, Defendant cannot show 4 how the amount in controversy is nearly twenty-five times more than the economic damages 5 sought.

6       C. Offer of Judgment

7           While an offer of judgment is not dispositive, it may be “relevant evidence of the 8 amount in controversy if it appears to reflect a reasonable estimate of the plaintiff’s claim.”
9 See Cohn v. Petsmart, Inc., 281 F.3d 837, 840 (9th Cir. 2002) (discussing settlement offers).
10 For example, the court in Ritthaler v. IDS Property Casualty Insurance Company considered 11 the defendant rejection of the plaintiff’s $68,000 offer of judgment in holding the amount in 12 controversy did not exceed $75,000. 2007 U.S. Dist LEXIS 58323 (D. Ariz. July 20, 2007)
13 at *3. Here, Plaintiff filed a $70,000 Offer of Judgment with its Complaint, suggesting 14 Plaintiff believed the amount in controversy was less than $75,000. (Dkt. # 2 Ex. A). More 15 importantly, Defendant rejected Plaintiff’s Offer of Judgment, implying Defendant also 16 believed it could resolve the case for less than $70,000. (Dkt. # 14 at 7.)

17           CONCLUSION

18           Removal to federal court was improper because Defendant has not shown by a 19 preponderance of the evidence the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000 to establish 20 jurisdiction. As such, remand to Pinal County Superior Court is appropriate.

21           IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED: Plaintiff’s Motion to Remand (Dkt. # 10) is 22 GRANTED. The Clerk is directed to remand this case to the Pinal County Superior Court.

23           DATED this 4th day of September, 2009.
